Things have changed in high schools now that there are AP classes, which didn't exist when some of us were in high schools.

Our Northern New Jersey strategic plan includes four strategic pillars: one involves reaching out to potential new members, another is to engage and retain existing members, the third is public service, and the fourth is running the chapter well.

Topic: Why are there chess Grandmasters, but not Grandmasters of noughts and crosses (otherwise known as tic-tac-toe)? It is because chess is "harder" – but what do we really mean by that? Answering that question leads us to develop the idea of mathematical complexity, which is a measure of how 'big' a game is. We'll look at the complexity of popular games, and ask: what is the hardest game of all time?

Our Speaker

Professor Sarah Hart is the first woman Professor of Geometry at Gresham College, and was appointed in 2020. She is Professor Emerita of Mathematics at Birkbeck, University of London.
